

How to Teach Your Dog to Hate the Crate

How to Teach Your Dog to Hate the Crate

Published February 10, 2026

SHARE

- Facebook \(opens in new window\)
- Twitter \(opens in new window\)
- Pinterest \(opens in new window\)
- Download \(opens in new window\)
- <?xml version="1.0" encoding="UTF-8"?> Email \(opens in new window\)
- Print \(opens in same window\)

Crate training your dog sounds difficult, doesn't it? How do you know which size crate to get, or how much time your dog should spend in it? Don't worry, we have good news! Training is much easier than most people think. In fact, we're always training our dogs, whether we mean to or not. The question is...what are they learning?

Here's a list of some of the most common ways pet owners train their dogs to hate their crate.

Tip #1: Crate Training Starts with the Right (or Wrong) Sized Crate

The first decision you make about your dog's crate has a big impact on how and what you train them to think about it. Nothing will turn your buddy off the idea of spending time in there faster than picking one that's too big to settle down in. Dogs are den animals and like to feel safe and secure in an enclosed space. Expecting them to feel cozy in a big, wide-open crate basically defeats the purpose

On the flipside, choosing a crate that's too small will train them to hate it as well. Spending time in a space that's too small to sprawl out in will quickly make your dog associate that spot with feeling confined and uncomfortable.

Really, all they want is a cozy place to call their own. Making your dog love their crate means you have to find one that fits —not too big, not too small.

Tip #2: Your Puppy Wants a Relaxing Spot for Their Crate

Where you put the crate can also make all the difference. A lot of people train their dog to hate the crate by placing it somewhere that guarantees their dog will never want to be there. Getting your dog to calm down while your roommate learns French horn is probably not happening. The same goes for overly active areas of the house, like the kitchen or a child's playroom. Too much stimulation makes it hard to rest and relax.

Your dog will really only love their crate if you put it somewhere safe and peaceful. It wouldn't hurt to pay attention to whether your dog prefers to spend time close to you and your family or off in a secluded side-room where they can nap in peace.

Table of Contents

Tip #3: Make Your Dog's Crate Mean "Bad"

Finally, if you want to ensure that your dog will never develop a loving relationship with their crate, use it as a form of negative reinforcement. It turns out that putting your dog into their crate when they've chewed an entire roll of toilet paper or when they won't stop whining doesn't train them to stop those behaviors. It just trains them to think of their crate as a villain and to see time in there as punishment.

While you're training your dog to hate their crate, you could also ruin the "Come" command. Calling your dog over in a loving voice, then nudging them into the crate is a great way to break down whatever trust you've built with them. Just remember, giving your dog a little positive attention while in the crate is going to make them feel secure. Not leaving them unattended and barking for too long also helps make the crate feel less like jail.

Congratulations! Your dog is ready to hate their crate.

If you decide you'd rather help your dog love their crate, just do the opposite of the things we've listed above.

- Choose a crate that fits your dog.
- Find a cozy, peaceful spot for it.
- Give your dog plenty of encouragement while they're inside to teach them that the crate should be their happy place.

More Articles Like This

Why Does My Dog Lick \(Everything\) So Much?

Dogs like to lick: themselves, you, surfaces, objects and other dogs. It's a common behavior across the animal kingdom, but we take particular notice of our dogs because they live with us. Intermittent licking is perfectly normal, but excessive licking has a wide range of potential causes that are worth checking about.

READ MORE

Dog Dental Cleaning: What To Expect And How To Prepare

Dog dental cleanings can help your pup feel their best. Learn what to expect from these vet visits and what you can do at home to keep their teeth healthy.

READ MORE

2 Steps on How to Fix Bad Dog Breath

Dog parents are no strangers to bad breath. From waking up to smelly puppy kisses to being held captive in a car with your dog's stinky breath, you've had your fair share of not-so-fresh breath encounters. But, there's a simple routine you can follow to help get rid of your dogs bad breath.

READ MORE

Why Does My Dog Eat Gross Stuff – and Should I Be Worried?

Sometimes dogs will look at a lawn or a dog park and see a big, tasty buffet: dirt, grass, poop and who knows what else? Dogs eating odd nonfood items is a relatively common behavior; the condition even has a name: pica. But you keep your pooch well-fed with plenty of tasty, nutritional food, so why would they choose t

READ MORE

Source URL:

<https://www.greenies.com/blogs/what-were-barking-about-greenies/how-to-teach-your-dog-to-hate-the-crate>